Q.1 Read the passage and answer the following questions:-

Animals are an important part of the eco- system of the Earth. There are some animals that are no longer seen on the Earth today. They are called extinct animals. Dinosaurs and dodos are the extinct animals .The tiger is an endangered animal. It is hunted for its skin and bones. A hundred years ago there were more than over one lakh tigers in the world, but today there are just around 5000 left. The government protects the tigers in the national parks, reserves and wildlife sanctuaries. Here tigers can roam around freely and hunt for food. Project tiger was launched in India in 1972. 27 tiger reserves come under this project. It aims to protect the tiger population in India. The Jim Corbett National Park in Uttarakhand was the first protected area for tigers in India. It was set up in 1935.

Human activities threaten the survival of many animals. Hunting and poaching are serious threats to wild animals. Both of these activities are illegal .We should help to increase awareness about animal cruelty.
