Q1. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions given below -

The white Bengal tigers are distinct due to the colour of their fur. The white fur is due to the lack of a pigment called pheomelanin. This pigment is found in Bengal tigers with orange-coloured fur. When compared, the white Bengal tigers tend to grow faster than the orange Bengal tigers. They also tend to be bigger and heavier at birth and as fully grown adults. White Bengal tigers are fully grown when they are 2-3 years of age .White male tigers reach the weight of 200-230 Kilograms and can grow up to 3 meters of length. The white Bengal tigers’ stripes are like fingerprints. No two tigers have same the same pattern. The stripes are actually a pigmentation of the skin. White Bengal tigers are very rare. Their unique white colour fur has made them popular in entertainment and at zoos. .
