SECTION A
(READING: 6 MARKS)

Read the passage and answer the following:

(1x6=6)

People tend to amass possessions, sometimes without being aware of doing so. They can have a delightful surprise when they find something useful which they didn't know they owned. Those who never have to change house become indiscriminate collectors of what can only be described as clutter. They leave unwanted objects in drawers, cupboards and attics for years in the belief that they one day need them. Old people also accumulate belongings for two other reasons, lack of physical and mental energy and sentiment. Things owned for a long time are full of associations with the past, perhaps with the relatives who are dead and so they gradually acquire a sentimental value.

Some things are deliberately kept in an attempt to avoid wastage. Among these are string and brown paper, kept by thrifty people when a parcel has been opened. Collecting small items can be a mania. A lady cuts out from newspaper sketches of model clothes that she would like to buy if she had money. As she is not rich, the chances are that she will never be able to afford such purchases. It is a harmless habit but it litters up her desk.

Collecting as a serious hobby is quite different and has many advantages. It provides relaxation for leisure hours as just looking at one's treasure is always a joy. One doesn't have to go out for amusement as the collection is housed at home. Whatever it consists of—stamps, records, first edition of books, china—there is always something to do in connection with it, from finding the right place for the latest edition to verifying facts in reference books. This hobby educates one not only in the chosen subject, but also in general matters which have some bearing on it.

There are other benefits also. One gets to meet likeminded collectors to get advice, to compare notes, exchange articles. So one's circle of friends grows. Soon the hobby leads to travelling, perhaps a meeting in another town, possibly a trip abroad in search of a rare specimen, for collectors are not confined to one country. Over the years one may well become an authority on ones hobby and will probably be asked to give informal talks to little gatherings and then if successful, to large audience.
